4-H: Building Life Skills Through Hands-on Learning

Stern, Emma

Abstract — In this presentation, I will explain my business analysis of Franklin County Purdue Extension. I will explain these findings through a swot analysis of findings during my 15 hours of service learning with the organization.

I. INTRODUCTION

I spent 15 hours volunteering my time at a Purdue extension, 4-H office. During my time I worked with the educators to develop a spring break day camp for at risk 6th and 7th graders. While there I did a formal swot analysis to find how they can approve and what is working for them. I found many things from the goodness they are doing by teaching the children hands on skills to their threats of low funding.

II. FINDINGS

The major finding during my research included the strengths, weaknesses, opportunities and threats of Purdue extension. Some of my major points within that analysis but not limited to include, hands on learning, in and after school projects, bad communication, low funding and low volunteer numbers.
