Le Travail: Problems with Tipping

Phillips, Jessica

Abstract — In this presentation, I will explore my own opinions and point of view concerning tipping in the U.S. through a poster board.

I. INTRODUCTION

This system is outdated and discriminatory. It benefits owners and operators within the service industry while taking advantage of the very people it's success is dependent upon: servers and customers.

II. FINDINGS

Tipping should be optional and servers should be paid a living wage for their work by the company that employ's them. My research found that the percentage of the bill left in a tip is generally unaffected by quality of service and servers of color are tipped less on average, across the board. The research I cite are from different psychology studies, one a controlled environment with an independent variable and one a survey. I also speak on my personal experience within the industry.
